This is a significant moment in the history of our scientific understanding and socio-political concern about early childhood development and health (ECDH). The RWJF Center for Health Policy at the University of New Mexico is therefore convening national and local researchers, practitioners, and policy makers to address a series of questions intended to provide insights on how to improve ECDH outcomes in New Mexico. Collectively the speakers will seek to strengthen connections between several domains – between understandings of development and health; between local, national and global early childhood policy initiatives; between science/scholarship, practice, and policy.
